

Save valuable resources and gain a high level of assurance* based on the criteria of your choosing.

Why CRI?

A direct examination from CRI makes it possible for your organization to measure and evaluate non-historical data and emerging non-financial subject matter. A direct examination engagement measures and evaluates underlying subject matter against criteria and performs other procedures to obtain sufficient appropriate evidence. Our practitioners can then express an opinion in a written report that conveys the results of the measurement or evaluation performed. This can be accomplished even when an organization does not have internal staff with the necessary knowledge to perform such measurements and evaluations, thus saving valuable resources. Another benefit to direct examinations is reporting on increasingly important things pertaining to an organization's industry that can be difficult to assess. If your business desires a reasonable level of assurance on the criteria of your choosing, then a direct examination from CRI may be suitable for you.
