

Give your third-party relationships the limited assurance* they require with a Review engagement from CRI.

Why CRI?

CRI's team analytically reviews financial information and inquiries from your organization's management team — to determine whether material modifications should be made to the financial statements for them to conform with the applicable financial reporting framework. A review engagement does not entail detailed verification and testing or gathering an understanding of your internal controls. However, it does provide limited assurance to third-parties such as insurance companies and financial institutions by reporting on financial statements as a whole based on the assurance provided.
