Data-Driven Practice Planning from the Ground Up.

Why CRI?

Launching a private practice is a dream for many physicians, but uncertainty surrounding the financial risk and business complexity can often make it difficult to take the first step. At CRI, we help physicians evaluate the financial viability of opening a practice and guide them through the start-up process with clarity and confidence.

We provide physician-centered support, grounded in real-world financial modeling. Our advisors develop detailed revenue and expense projections based on key data points such as reimbursement rates, patient volume, and service mix, giving you a clear picture of your practice's financial viability. We help you plan for both one-time startup costs and ongoing operational expenses, from facility buildout and technology to staffing and compliance. Through breakeven analysis and funding assessments, you'll know what it takes to get your practice off the ground. Once feasibility is established, we offer end-to-end guidance—entity formation, vendor selection, EMR systems, compensation models, and more. Every recommendation is tailored to your specialty, timeline, and vision, so you can confidently move forward and take ownership of your future.

With CRI as your advisory partner, you don't just open a practice, you build a sustainable business with a clear path to success.
